COMMITS SUICIDE

Carmel finds its way into the tabloids again by the recent suicide of a young girl in a local hotel. Miss Virginia Lee Carpenter, a former University of California student and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Carpenter, of Oakley, Alameda County, was found dead late Thursday afternoon.

She lay on the floor, her head in a pool of blood, with a revolver nearby. Undeniably a suicide, the usual explanatory note was not found. According to the police, Miss Carpenter apparently had shot herself below the right ear, severing a blood vessel. The bullet, found lodged in the room's woodwork, was from a cheap .38 caliber revolver.

Hotel officials, failing to get an answer to repeated phone calls to the girl's room, finally forced the door, and then called Police Chief Robert Norton, who immediately took charge.

Shirley Hoffman spent the week end in Carmel with her mother, Mrs. Flora Bowley Hoffman.

Actor

Peter Lundberg, who did such a fine piecec of acting as "Hunt Emerson" in "Man With Nine Lives," will play the role of "Gustav Rosenberg" in "Kind Lady," the play to be presented by the St. James Repertory Company Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Lundberg worked for three years at the Goodman Theater in Chicago, and on Broadway played in "Peter Ibbetson," "Lady With a Lamp," "Park Avenue Limited," and "The Anatomist." He began his career as an illustrator, but was fired for constantly reading plays during working hours, which is perhaps one reason he is such a splendid actor now.

MORE GOLF TOURNAMENTS

The annual California State Golf Championship at Pebble Beach August 15-22 promises to hold the attention of many of the top-ranking golfers of the state. This year the play is to finish just in time to allow golfers to reach the nationals at Portland.

The qualifying round will consist of 36 holes medal play, with 18 to be played at Cypress Point and 18 at Pebble Beach on Sunday and Monday August 15-16. The final round will take place Thursday, August 19. Match play will consist of 18 holes in all rounds of all flights except the 36 hole championship flight, which will consist of the best 32 gross scores. All entries must be in by August 14, accompanied by a $5 entry fee.

Again this year the California Amateur Handicap will be played in conjunction with the championship, from August 16 to the 21. The California Amateur Handicap is open to those with handicaps of eight of more.

Winding up Golf Week at Del Monte will be the annual Del Monte Woman's Tournament from August 18 to 22.

Legion Barn Dance

The Barn Dance, given by the American Legion last Saturday night was a huge success according to all reports. The dance was held in cooperation with the County Fair, and it has been said that Carmelites have never been seen enjoying themselves so thoroughly.

See "Tatters"

It is a lot more work to frown instead of smile, according to scientists, for many more muscles of the face are used in the unpleasant grimace.

There are lots of good laughs in "Tatters", at the First Theatre in Monterey, and you don't have to work hard to have a good time.

See it this week, by all means, for these will be the last performances. Congratulations to all who have taken part ni this merry little play.

AUTOMOBILE OVERTURNS

At the intersection of the coast highway and the Carmel road at the river bridge Friday afternoon a collision of two automobiles resulted in the overturn of one and the injury of Mrs. Eudore F. Schmidt, who was taken to the Peninsula Community hospital by the Carmel Red Cross ambulance in its first emergency call.

Mr. and Mrs. Eudore Schmidt, Stockton, were traveling north and collided with a car owned by Mrs. A. Levy, El Paso, Texas, which had stopped to study a sign. Although the Levy Car sustained minor dents, the other car overturned and was badly damaged.

Mrs. Schmidt, who suffered from a cut on her forehead and bad bruises, was later released from the hospital to return to her home with her husband and three children, who were uninjured.

STARS' DOUBLES

Four actors who so closely resemble Edward G. Robinson, James Cagney, Jack LaRue and George Raft, that they are invariably mistaken for these famous stars, appear in a scene of "The Gay Desperado," the new Pickford-Lasky production, starring Nino Martini at the Filmart Theatre, starting Friday.

Actually they are Lem Taub, Bob O'Keefe, Tony Orlando and Manuel Pelufo, respectively, and they were chosen to appear in the hilarious American gangster sequence of this gay romance because of their resemblance to the four leading stars noted for their hoodlum characterizations.

Ida Lupino and Leo Carrillo are featured in the film, which Rouben Mamoulian directed for release through United Artists.

What Is Wrong With The Fair This Year?

By NORMAN R. BALLER

Some of us would like to know what is wrong this year with the Monterey District Fair. That something is wrong is evident. Discounting the few grumblers who are always wearers of chips on shoulders, there is a muttering that has grown so loud it can be heard over the hill, even here in Carmel. Following the noise to its source, Alvarado street, we find that business men and Monterey organization members have become pretty dissatisfied with a number of things, and all of this is in spite of the fanfare of publicity, pictures of Tiny Kline and her daredevils and the numbers of jeans and bandanas being worn on the Peninsula.

Number One Complaint: "They put the screws on me and I had to advertise in the Fair program." Looking into the matter we find that spaces in the program are being sold at seven-fifty and up, with a few at half that price. In counting up the ads in the program itself, we find that Peninsula merchants have been "taken" for a total of around thirteen hundred dollars. This, minus the printing bill which runs around three hundred dollars, leaves a total of thousand chips. Three men selling the ads received twenty per cent commission and the balance, after that is subtracted, is a nice eight hundred smackers (all paid in advance, of course,) which goes where? The rumor is that five per cent goes to the Fair itself. If this is true what becomes of the seven hundred and sixty dollars which is left?

Number Two Complaint: "I don't see why it is called the Monterey District Fair, inasmuch as it is mostly an outside thing. It is managed by outside promoters, all of the printing except the Fair program itself is done on the outside, the carnival takes plenty of dough with it when it leaves, the livestock and poultry exhibits are, to a great extent, traveling shows that visit all the fairs in the West and take the prize money with them, all of the entertainment is brought in from the outside and thus their pay goes with them . . . and especially, visitors from Watsonville and Salinas will undoubtedly visit the Fair and drive back home without coming in to town to spend the money the local business houses would like them to spend. Some pockets are going to be pretty well lined out of the whole thing, but those pockets won't belong to the business men who have contributed in numerous ways to make the Fair a success."

Number Three: "Look at the Salinas Rodeo. A few years ago it was almost on the rocks. Salinas merchants got together, gave money, worked hard to put it back on its feet again, and today it is known as one of the greatest outdoor shows in the West. If Salinas can do it, why can't we? If they don't need a carload of outside men to put the rodeo over, why does Monterey?"

Number Four: "A certain Monterey restaurant owner, who had the hot dog concession at the Fair last year was told at that time that he could have it again this year. He made his arrangements, and a couple of weeks ago was stunned to learn that the concession had been handed to somebody's brother-in-law, who is also from the outside. And he is plenty burnt!"

Number Five: "The Monterey Civic Club, which has done much in a quiet and unostentatious way for the town, expected to again have the concession of selling Spanish beans and coffee. The ladies had looked forward to it, as it would mean a few more dollars on the club mortgage and to add to their building fund. "Fine," they were told, "you can have it, but you must pay us twenty-five per cent of the gross take." That percentage of the gross, as any business person knows, means they would operate the concessions at a loss, or, at best, break even. What is the reason for this? Is it a form of protection to the hot dog concession? We would like to know."

Number Six: "Tatters," the amusing play which has had a most successful run in the First Theatre in Monterey this summer, and which has brought numerous tourists to the Peninsula for the main purpose of seeing it, is playing again during the same time as the Fair. Miss Watrous, one of those in charge of "Tatters," was asked by one of Fair officials to postpone the engagement. He was answered: "The First Theatre holds 149 persons; are you going to close the moving picture houses?"

Number Seven: "Several well known persons around Monterey, who first joined in the general spirit and donned jeans can now be seen in regular dress. Ask them why and you will be told that they are darned sick and tired going around dressed like a bumpkin just to put a lot of dough in pockets which will be worn on the first train out of here when the Fair is over.

It can't all be just rumor. Many persons would like to hear from anybody desiring to write pro or con on the matter. If the situation is as bad as would seem from all the talk going around, we feel that there should be a thorough investigation.

New Leaders In Californian Contest

An unbelievable number of votes are pouring into the Californian office every week for Circulation club members who are doing their very best to win the Ford V-8 Tudor sedan now on display in the Berthold Motor company showroom, Seventh and San Carlos, Carmel. The interest shown in this contest is of an intensity never before experienced in a competition of this nature.

The bonus ballots offered last week will be awarded again this week for the last time. Contestants will have no better chance to gain extra points during the campaign, so it behooves every club member to make a special effort to get every possible subscription this week.

The bonus votes are given in addition to points given weekly on groups of subscriptions, and are very important in winning either the Ford car or the cash prizes of $200, $75 and $25. The groups of subscriptions may consist of yearly subscriptions or their equivalent in those for longer terms.

The competitive spirit is now running so high that no candidate seems able to hold the lead longer than a few days.

Mrs. Doug Rogers, wife of one of Carmel's police officers was first at noon Monday, Miss Mary Wheldon, charming clerk at the Bank of Carmel, was second and Miss Patsy Shephard, lovely young daughter of Major Shephard, and who led last week, was a close third.

Rev. Willis G. White, Mrs. John Mather, Mrs. Verne Regan, Miss Ellen Skadan, Miss Barbara Crompton, and Miss Suzy Chapman are all among the high candidates. Several other club members have made a nice gain this week, among them Mrs. Roy Frateis, Miss Happy Whyte, F. W. Bryant and Miss Dorothey De Amaral.

The list of club members with votes cast are given below, to noon Monday:

Mrs. Doug Rogers	359,400

PADRE SERRA ANNIVERSARY TO BE OBSERVED IN MISSION

Sunday, August 29, at the Carmel Mission, the 153rd anniversary of the death of Padre Junipero Serra will be observed.

Father Michael O'Connell will begin the ceremonies for the Spanish apostle of California with Solemn High Mass and continue with blessing and consecrating the restored cell of Father Serra.

Excelentisma Maria Antonia Field, assisted by descendants of Spanish pioneer families, will lay a large wreath on Serra's tomb. Following this, on the Mission grounds, under the direction of Mrs. Harry Thompson, a Spanish fiesta program of music and dances will be held.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Martin Ogden, the parents of Terry Ogden, who will soon open a photographic studio in the Seven Arts Court, are spending a short time here. They have been visiting in Honolulu for the past year, and are stopping off here on the way back to their home in Hartford, Connecticut.

Mrs. Frank Baker and daughters, Jane and Pat, of San Jose, have taken a house on the Point for the month of August. The Bakers are Carmel visitors every summer.

"Tatters" To Begin Last Run Tomorrow

For the first time in over seventy-five years, the First Theatre in California, built by Jack Swan in 1847 in Monterey, is no longer dark. "Tatters, the Pet of Squatter's Gulch", an old melodrama, opened on June 3, 1937, on the occasion of Monterey's 167th birthday.

Opening night sold out at two dollars and a half a seat, and the old bar in front was crowded with sophisticates buying soda pop. Since that evening "Tatters" has run at popular prices for four week-ends, and goes on in a final gala performance this week beginning Thursday.

The Western type of "Tatters," "little, but tough" is brilliantly played by Mary Henderson, one of Carmel's leading actresses. Through three acts the arch villain, fiercely and terrifyingly enacted by Lloyd Weer, pursues Tatters and her beloved half-breed Indian, "Mr. Ferris," in the person of Gordon Knowles, who maintains inexorable virtue throughout.

In addition to those described above, the cast includes Bob Bratt, who revealed a new talent to the Peninsula, when he stepped into the part of Abe Witherspoon. As a comedian, Bob Bratt has shown himself to his laughing public, as a "natural," and in the 14th performance was asked by the management to undertake the part of master of ceremonies, the dominating role which had hitherto been carried by Blackie O'Neal.

Major Timberlake, first played by Blackie O'Neal is now, in the competent hands of Ross Miller, while Mrs. Timberlake is excellently portrayed by Betty Morehouse. Byington Ford is the present "John Marston," which was first played by Milt Latham. Lillian Collins, the original "Moses Lillyblossom" was relieved for two week-ends by Ivy Van Cott, but will be back in her part again for "Tatter's" last appearance. Manuela Hudson was the first "Clementina," but for six performances Ruth Marion gave this minor role distinction and significance. This week that clever dancer and comedian, Betty Carr, will take the part. Other minor roles are excellently played by Billy Shepherd, Rex Flaherty, Robert McMillan and Frank Wilkinson.

The famous "After Show" follows "Tatters," featuring Betty Carr, Connie Clampett and Ruth Marion.

"Tatters" is under the management of Dene Denny and Hazel Watrous, with Connie Bell as production manager, and Galt Bell, director, the same group who gave the original production of the "Drunkard." Under the direction of By Ford there will soon be another play in production to be given in the First Theatre.

Mrs. J. J. Regan had as week-end guests Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Tetzloff and Miss Ruby Oldham, all of Ventura. They stopped off here on their way to Seattle, Washington where they sail for a three weeks' cruise to Alaska.

Mrs. Fenton Grigsby and daughter, Mary Agnes, returned this week after a trip to Mexico.

ARMY BOMBERS HERE

During the past week the Monterey Airport has been visited by large numbers of Army planes, for the most part bi-motored Martin Bombers—en route to Hamilton Field in the San Francisco Bay area for concentration. Many of the planes came from Mitchell Field, New York, and other distant sections of the country to take part in the concentration.

POSSIBLE NEW CITY HALL

At the last session of the Carmel City Council, which saw Carmel's City Attorney tender his resignation, a letter was received from E. H. Ewig offering the city council sufficient space over the Post Office to carry on their activities at a rate $30 less per month than the rate now paid by the city.

The letter proposed rental on a three year basis with a sliding scale running from $65 to $75 per month, light, water and heat included.

The attention of the Council was called to a complaint arising from the noise of the planing machinery and circular saws in the M. J. Murphy Lumber Yard. The council voted that a committee should investigate the complaint and submit a report at some future date.

AUTHOR HERE

Julian Dana, who wrote "The Man Who Built San Francisco," was in Carmel last week-end. Mr. Dana has had a signal honor accorded him in being selected to write one of the American river book series. Among the writers for other rivers are Booth Tarkington and Blair Niles. Mr. Dana is writing on the Sacramento River. He also has a novel coming out this fall on California.

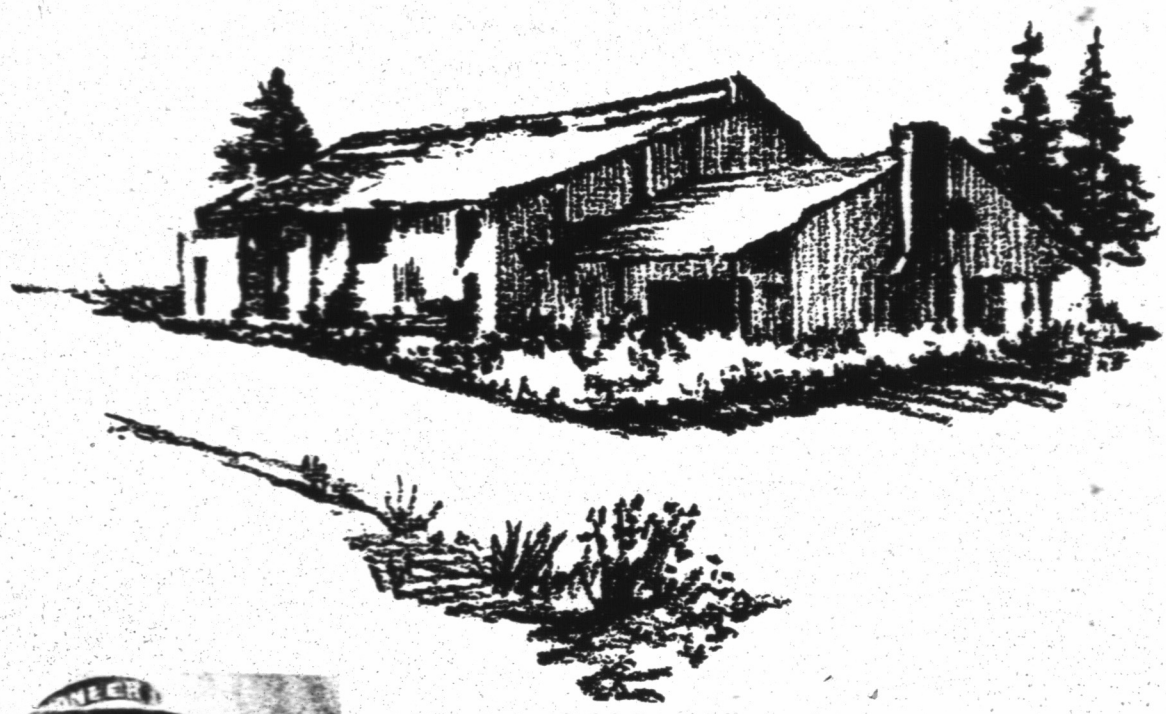
Old Jack Swan and His Theatre



If Old Jack Swan Could Hear Laughter

Old Jack Swan would swell with pride if he could, for just one night, hear the laughter and join in the singing at "Tatters, the Pet of Ssuatter's Gulch," which is having its last performances this week at the First Theatre of California. For Jack Swan built the adobe which is now famous.

In the year 1843 Swan arrived in Monterey, off the good ship Soledad, just up from Mazatlan. It is suspected that he "jumped ship" when he reached this port. At any rate, he went into business immediately and made cakes, pies and bread for sale. With the proceeds he bought the land at Pacific and Scott streets, built a saloon and boarding house for sailors.

Colonel Stevenson and his New York Volunteers were stationed at the Presidio and, looking for entertainment, decided to produce a play. Jack Swan loaned them the use of the main room, and with the aid of tallow candles and whale oil drips as footlights, the evening was a merry one. Only five women were in attendance at that first performance, "Putnam of the Lion, Son of 1776." The seats sold for as high as five dollars each. Among those who participated was Major John O'Neal, great grandfather of Neil Fleischer, of the Monterey County Bank in Carmel.

One of the later plays was "Nan, the Good for Nothing." So great was the success of these amateur performances that traveling companies began to come into Monterey and always played at Jack Swan's Saloon.

A fine story has gone the rounds for years that Jenny Lind sang there, but this has been debunked heartily by all who have investigated. The legend is said to have grown out of an idea of Swan's himself, that it was good advertising to say so, even though she hadn't.

The myth of the wooden curtain has also been exploded. The wooden curtain was a movable partition, built by Swan to close off the saloon from the rest of the building.

In 1909 the building was sold to the state. It was restored to its present beauty and charm and has since been a public museum, open to visitors each afternoon.

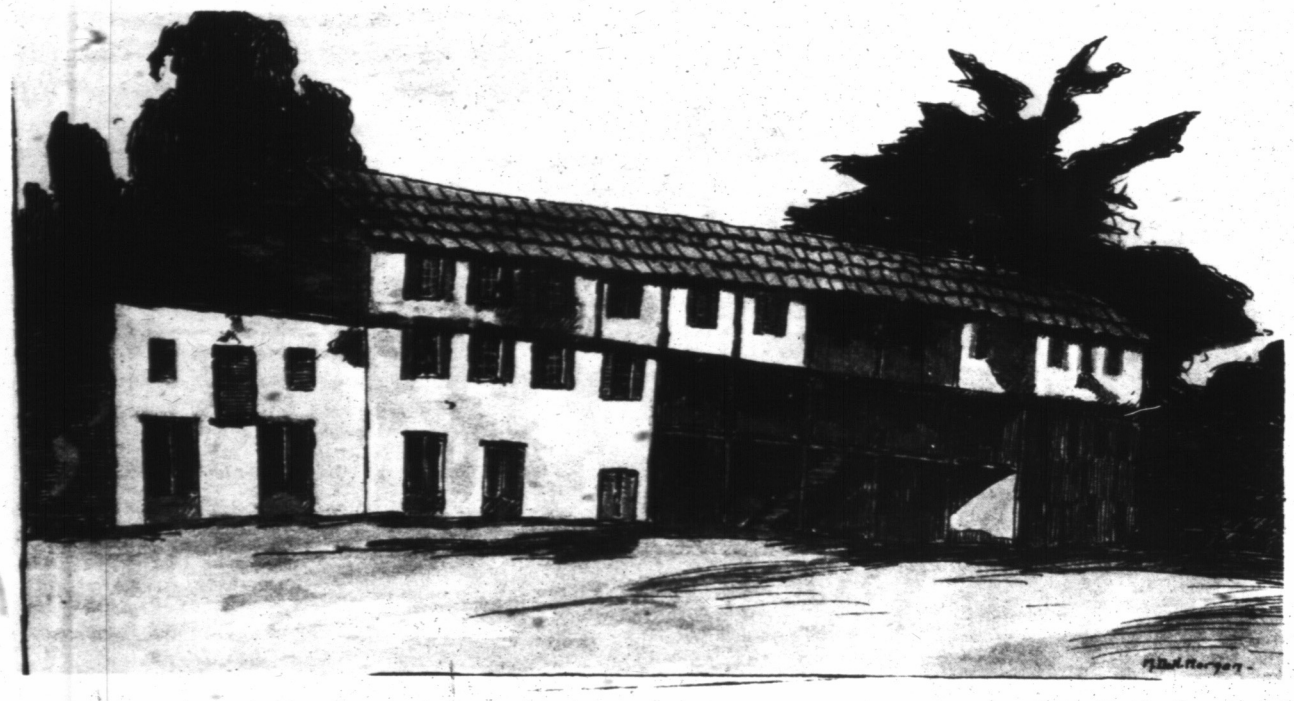
Morgan Sketch of Old Adobe



The Washington Hotel in Monterey, taken from a water color by M. DeNeale Morgan of Carmel, as a part of the Art Design of the WPA. The hotel was erected in 1832 and razed in 1914. It stood at the corner of Washington and Pearl streets.

Historic Manuscript To Be Displayed

From Scotland to Canada, from Canada to California by way of Panama would be a long and hard trip at any time for a father and mother and six children. But that trip, if made in the early 1850's would be a journey of unimaginable hardships which only a very adventurous and strong family could make and survive. The mother of M. De Neale Morgan and Thomas W. Morgan of Carmel was one of the six children who set sail for California, where they were to make their home, and the account of this trip and of the life they found upon their arrival in the golden state is described in a fascinating manner in the Reminiscences of Mrs. T. W. Morgan.

The manuscript, which contains much interesting material and gives a new viewpoint on life in the early days, has been prepared by Thomas W. Morgan and will soon be on display in Monterey with a portfolio of lovely water colors of historic adobes done by M. De Neale Morgan as a part of the Art Design department of the WPA.

During the last years of her life, spent in Carmel with her family, Mrs. Morgan dictated these reminiscences, and these colorful tales of a bygone day have now been put into manuscript form.

After crossing the Isthmus of Panama, the family boarded the ship, Golden Age, and set sail for California. Entering the Golden Gate, they were met by welcoming craft of all description. At that time San Francisco was seething over the James King of William killing, and fearing for the safety of his family, Mrs. Morgan's father engaged passage on Captain Josselyn's little schooner, which was bound for Monterey. They ran into a fearful storm on the way down and managed, after fighting it for hours, to come limping into the bay, with broken masts and rigging.

Mrs. Morgan and her sister Jenny started school in the little town, with Miss Rumsey as teacher. The school was located next to the convent on Franklin street, which was later torn down. The San Carlos Hotel now stands on that spot. The old quarter was later used as the school building, and the children were taught by Miss Ruth Anna Harker. The four hundred children who attended there often found it hard to study, when ex-

Clippings From 1880

In the 1880's Monterey was as attractive to visitors as it is now, but although the town has undergone many physical changes, the weather has evidently remained the same. The Salinas Weekly Index of that date says, "There is probably no place on the sea-shore in California so replete with natural charms as Monterey . . . There is more or less foggy weather in the spring months and occasionally foggy mornings in the summer. The latter, however, are really agreeable, as they infuse new life and freshness into tree and shrub flower, and are not in the least detrimental in their influences upon human beings at that season of the year." In the same issue of that paper this description appears. "There rises above the mingled foliage of surrounding oak, pine and cypress, a building of magnificent proportions, constructed in modern gothic style. This is the Hotel Del Monte, the 'Queen of American Watering Places!' "

The social life was evidently very gay, judging from these social notes found in the Argonaut for 1884.

"The hop got to working fairly Saturday evening at nine and kept till eleven. The main trouble arises from the fact that the dowagers will insist upon having the windows shut tight and fast, and the rooms get dreadfully hot and uncomfortable . . . It's quite miserable to become flustered and red and horrid after the first dance just because the windows can't be lowered at the top a little . . . Mrs. Rutherford is making some fine scores at ten-pins. She throws straight from the arm every time. Her rival is Mrs. Austin who rolls a very swift and sure ball . . . Sunday morning Mrs. Langtry was greeted in a way which wasn't at all nice. We all wanted to see her dreadfully. But the way people rushed upon her, and the hooting of Masters C. and B. and their fellow hobble-dehoys, caused her to retreat to her car and stay there. She told a gentleman she had never received such rude treatment before in her life."

However, even Del Monte had its dangerous moments—or so one would think from this tale of an unfortunate Mr. Cosgrave.

" . . . when I was at Del Monte in the late '80s I remember there was a man named Cosgrave who was the editor and publisher of a weekly tabloid and who had offended a great many of the young men because of his articles about some of the young ladies . . .

"The young men in talking about this fellow . . . and about his being present at the hotel thought it would be a good time to ride him on a rail and give him a good coat of tar and feathers. They came very near doing it but some of the older men persuaded them to give up the idea . . .

"However, when Cosgrave returned to San Francisco . . . one of the men who had been deeply offended by the articles published in Cosgrave's weekly followed him on the street car and when they both got off at the corner of Market and Third, gave him a good beating."

1880 must have been still the age of chivalry, but it was also the age of incredible clothing—especially for the women—and a hard time for editors.

Mrs. T .A. Farrell and children, Ida Mae, Joey and Tommy, of Sacramento, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Scatena for a week.

John von Salza and Charles Bechdolt spent last week end here as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay K. Gentry.

Stevenson House?

Noticed Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Simpson in Carmel over the week-end. Mr. Simpson is a professor at the University of California, and Mrs. Simpson is a well known artist in the Bey Region.

Where Did Stevenson Live In Monterey?

Where did Robert Louis Stevenson stay when he lived in Monterey? Did he, as has long been believed, stay in the so-called Stevenson House, or did he live in the frame house pictured above? There has been dispute over this question for a number of years, and an investigation made recently brings to light evidence that he might have stayed in both places. Neither story can be doubted, and yet Stevenson, in his letters, mentions only one room and that in "the French doctor's house." Here are the stories:

Mrs. T. A. Fussell, daughter of Jules Simoneau, French restaurant keeper who befriended Stevenson, is positive that the great author lived in what is called the Stevenson House. She had heard her father speak of visiting him in his rooms there and taking him food when he was ill. Many years later, when Simoneau was an old man, a woman who was doing research on Stevenson, came to Simoneau and asked to be taken to the exact room where he had stayed. She asked that because, at that time, there had been a dispute over the location. Simoneau, accompanied by his daughter and the woman, went to the Stevenson adobe and Simoneau showed her the room upstairs that faces the southwest, and said, "Here is where Stevenson lived."

Simoneau must have known. His restaurant, in those days, was at the triangle that is now occupied by the Standard Oil station, which is a matter of only a few steps to the historic building. One time, when Stevenson had not been in the restaurant for a few days, Simoneau went to his room and discovered him lying on the floor, in a crudely made bed, very ill. He brought him food and did what he could to nurse him back to health. Stevenson never forgot the old man's kindnesses, and sent him, later on, autographed copies of all his writings. These volumes are now in the Bancroft Library at the University of California.

The second tale concerns the frame building, now at 482 Tyler street, which was originally located next to the Larkin House on Main street. It was a plain front building then, the porches and stairs being added after its removal to the present location. In those days it was a boarding house run by Mrs. Rosalia Leese. Mrs. Ambrosio, well known member of the Boronda family, was a child of ten or twelve at the time Stevenson lived in Monterey, and she, accompanied by her grandmother, visited Mrs. Leese often. The child played in the house and occasionally ran up and down the hallway upstairs. Several times, while doing this, a man came out from one of the rooms, asked her not to make so much noise because it disturbed his writing, pulled her curls and gave her cookies. This man was Stevenson and "he was very pale and sick-looking."

Interesting, both stories, and both stories have all the earmarks of fact. It is possible, that he stayed in one place for a few days and then looked around for a permanent residence.

Vera Goeppart and Frances Chase of Piedmont, are spending a week in Carmel. Both girls are students at the University of California.

The above long, low, rambling California home was designed by Henry H. Gutterson and built by the Carmel Land Company on Hatton Fields Mesa. The lot is approxmately 120 by 132 feet deep. The main section of the building is of adobe, and the wings are of wood. One enters through a brick paved enclosure into a large living room. Turning to the left is a dining room that has the Carmel Mission as a center point of interest from the large window. The kitchen was planned by experts, with ample storage spaces for efficient and easy handling of work. A large laundry and 3 cabinets and an extra lavatory comprise a service wing.

In the south end of the living room is a door which opens into the sleeping wing with two very good sized bedrooms and more than usual closet space. The bathroom has the very latest fixtures and a shower built over the tub. At the end of the sleeping wing hall let us quote Lynda Sargent of the Carmel Cymbal—"So they thought up the Crow's Nest. We could say you have to stagger up to the Crow's Nest, but it is the stairs that stagger jauntily up—left, right; left, right—until you come to the litle study under the eaves with the Mission in your left eye and the long view of the Carmel Valley in your right and much much more beauty than you could shake a stick at . . ."

This house is of the most unusual construction and specifications: copper plumbing, 20 inch foundations, tongue and groove creosoted sheathing with an inch air space back of the 'dobe; a man's size rugged hand split cedar shake roof, a Mars automatic forced gas heater, which is controlled either from the living room or from the master bedroom so that one has merely to reach over and flip the switch from the bed and presto the house is warm. Aerials are built under the roof line for radios in the living room and the bedroom. It is complete and modern even to the plug for the electric razor in the bathroom.

Off the large sheltered brick terrace overlooking the Carmel Valley is a very ingenious barbecue grill, patterned by that master cook, Senor Edvardo Hatton. There are really too many features to enumerate and the house should be visited and inspected several times to be fully appreciated. So many people have sketched, photographed and measured these details that the Carmel Land Company, appreciating the compliment is willing to cooperate with anyone who desires to copy any of the many unusual features.

You or your broker may make an appointment with the Carmel Land Company or Thoburns to view this house. The price of which is $12,350.00 on very easy terms.

Of great interest to Carmelites, is the engagement of Kay Jones, known to Carmel as "Kay the Potter," and Bob Kinney, who was formerly the orchestra leader at Hotel Del Monte. The couple will be married in September.

Highway Accident

citing occurrences were taking place in town—quick justice or quick revenge on the part of the townspeople.

Social affairs of the community are graphically described. Some of the house parties lasted a week or more. A description is given of a grand ball at the Washington Hotel with gay young officers from the Presidio dancing attendance on the lovely Spanish and American girls of Monterey.

Mrs. Morgan describes an occasion when her father went outside one morning to attend to some farm work and came across a sleeping bear in the background. There were many bears in and around the vicinity, and a bear hunt was considered fine sport. Bull and bear fights, too, were held for amusement.

The wreck of the North Star, off Point Lobos near Carmel Bay is, described. The ship was bearing a valuable cargo which was intended to be carried inland from Mazatlan. The duties were so high that the captain made for Monterey where he ran into trouble. The ship was a total wreck but all hands were saved, and the cargo washed up on the rocks and beaches. The people of the town made for the spot by the hundreds and retrieved what they were able to lay their hands on. Captain J. B. R. Cooper brought a number of wagons from Monterey, loaded them up with the spoils, took them back to the town and made a small fortune out of the proceeds.

Quaint Old Carmel

An interesting scene of early Carmel, taken about 1915. The banner acros sthe street and the large advertising signs are possibly the answer to those who want Carmel "kept as it used to be."

Monterey Theater Once Saw Greatest Actors

In looking back over the years and discovering that Monterey was at one time considered the best show town in the state, aside from the two major cities, it is not so surprising that "Tatters" has had such a long and successful run.

In the days, when all theatrical companies went on tour after Eastern engagements, top notch actors and actresses of the country played in one-night stands at the Monterey Theatre, then known as the T. A. Work Theatre.

Now called "The Flea House" by local wits, it is doubtful if any member of the audience today who sits and watches the Western thrillers could possibly imagine the time when everyone came from miles around, hitched up the carriages on lower Alvarado and sat in the boxes with shiny brass rails, admired the gilded scroll work on the interior and read the ads on the screen while waiting for Nance O'Neil or Mrs. Fiske to make their exciting appearances.

Interesting indeed is the picture it brings to mind. Two articles which appeared in the Monterey Peninsula Herald of November, 1933, and written by Frank Schultzberg tell the story.

"There has come the thought, entirely personal, that perhaps the old Monterey Theatre should be listed as an historical spot. That may cause a smile, for it is not picturesque, nor is it an old adobe. Nevertheless, local stage history has been made within its walls."

The theatre was built in 1905 by T. A. Work, the first real house that could invite theatrical companies to play in Monterey County. The first performance, "Under Southern Skies," played to a packed house. Then, in quick succession, came Nance O'Neil in "The Sorceress," Henry Miller in "The Great Divide," "The Lion and the Mouse," and "Traviata" with forty musicians in the pit.

The San Francisco fire and earthquake of 1906 killed the show business in the West for over a year, and during that time the stage was dark in the old theatre, and the gilded scroll work forlorn. In 1907, however, it came back in a rush. Schultzberg says: "The brass rails were polished and the carpeted stairs brushed for the ladies and gentlemen in gowns and top hats who wended their way again onto lower Alvarado in phaetons from Del Monte."

Margaret Anglin, Theador Roberts, Murray and Mack, Florence Rockwell, Kolb and Dill, Maude Amber, May Robson, Ruth Chatterton, Henrietta Crossman, Virginia Harned, Macklin Arbuckle, Charlotte Greenwood and Dale Winter are only a few fo the famous men and women whose names appeared on programs of the theatre.

Lew Dunbar, who teamed with Will King for years, remembered Monterey, when asked by a friend. "Monterey? Oh yes, I played there. We had to stop the show for five minutes while the train went by."

The lilting strains of "The Chocolate Soldier" and "Pink Lady" made the walls ring in those days, and perhaps those same walls still retain a memory of those grand old troupers whose one thought was "the show must go on"—and it always did.

DANCE AT DEL MONTE

The imaginative railroad trip to Mexico City for "Media Noche en Mejico" at Hotel Del Monte Friday night proved to be very popular with Carmelites. Those seen wandering through the streets were Mr. and Mrs. Gene Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Philips, Mr. and Mrs. William Dekker, Captain and Mrs. Shelburn Robison, Patricia Lee, Happy Whyte, Norris Thompson, Alice Ogilvie, Beverly and Joan Tait, Sue Brownell, Marion Whitney, Betty Rae Sutton, Annabelle Scott, Shirley Hoffman, Betty Hyde, Mary Elizabeth La Rue, Alice Cleghorne, Pat Coblentz, Bud Todd, Louis and Fran Conlan, George Aucourt, Ray Burns, Willard Whitney, Marcy Brennan, Colin Alderman, Bernard Dickey, Harrison Godwin, Bob Edgren, Bernard Schulte and Jack Lawrence.

Although the American Legion Barn Dance attracted many Carmelites, glimpsed dancing at Del Monte Saturday night were: Mary Elizabeth La Rue, Nancy Gross, Elizabeth Todd, Marguerite Tickle, Budd Todd and Bill Judson.

Repertory Company To Play "Kind Lady"

"Kind Lady," the play to be presented by the St. James Repertory Company this Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday in the Golden Bough Green Room, is adapted from one of Hugh Walpole's stories b Edward Chodorov.

The plot shows how a dignified and aristocratic middle-aged woman, living quietly in her London home, is gradually surrounded by a family of diabolically clever crooks, who by means of ingenious potting alienate her own family and friends from her and practically convince the outside world that the kind lady is hopelessly insane. She herself, toward the end, becomes almost convinced of this fact. As the exciting mystery surrounding her life and actions becomes intensified, the suspense brooding over the house takes on the most dramatic proportions. Up to the end it looks as though the kind lady were doomed to lose, not only her entire property, but her sanity.

The leads are in the competent hands of Peggy Burke and George T. Bolton and the rest of the cast is as follows:

Mr. Foster .....Kendall Power
Lucy Weston ....Thelma B. Miller

Phyllis Glenning ....Faye Emerson
Peter Santard ....Robert Galbraith

Annual Rummage Sale

The ladies of the auxiliary will hold the annual Community Church rummage sale from August 21 to 28 this year. It will be located in the shop next to Claywell's drug store on Dolores street.

Articles for sale—toys, furniture, books, pictures, bedding, clothing, shoes, hats, rugs, lamps, fancy work, umbrellas, etc., are being received by Mrs. Jessie Askew, on San Carlos street between 4th and 5th.

In charge of the affair are Mrs. Everett Smith, president of the auxiliary, Miss Frances Farrington and Mrs. Jessie Askew, markers, Mrs. Peggy Logan, in charge of the salesroom, and Mrs. Mabel Hart, in charge of the proceeds.

The rummage sale is always an interesting Village feature and will only last a week this year. This means that those who wish to contribute do so as soon as possible for the convenience of the markers. Proceeds from the sale go to the general church fund.

FOUR ARRESTS THIS WEEK

Four persons have been arrested during the past week by members of the Carmel police force. Three were arrested for traffic violations and one for vagrancy. Harold Neilson was given a ticket for passing a stop sign and being unable to produce an operators' license. Arnold F. Roberts, of Los Angeles, was arrested for reckless driving, and Robert K. Knudson, of Patterson, was arrested for driving with four persons in the front seat of his car. The one man arrested for vagrancy was escorted to the city limits and asked to stay out.

The marriage of Will Claywell, well known Carmelite, and Mary Jane Straub, of San Francisco and Beverly Hills took place last Friday in Reno. The young couple returned to Carmel Monday, and will make their home here.
